THE WIND ON THE HILL.

BY ISABELLA PYVIS MAYO.

Oh! sweet is the summer air
Which steals down the chestnut walk,
When the children are playing there,
While lovers wander and talk.
But the wind on the hill for me,
And the mist across the down,
And the bright light over the sea,
And ships coming home to the town!

Oh! merry the sunny strand,
Where waves wash in at one's feet,
And the wives and the children stand
And wait for the fishing fleet.
But the wind on the hill for me,
And the mist across the down,
And the strong light o'er the sea,
And ships coming home to the town!

Oh! stately the castle tower,
'Mid its cedars, dark and still,
Where ghosts come back at midnight hour,
And the midday sun falls chill.
But the wind on the hill for me,
And the mist across the down,
And the wild light over the sea,
And ships coming home to the town!

And solemn the gray church spire
(I see it, looking down)
With its weather-vane tipped with fire,
As the sun sets over the town.
But the wind on the hill for me,
And the mist across the down,
And the golden light on the sea,
And ships going out from the town!

There's a grave by the old church door
(That changed all the world one day,)
Can it be the mist from the moor
Creeps up as I look that way?
But the wind on the hill for me,
And the mist across the down,
Though the light is sad on the sea,
And the ships going out from the town!

I should like to die on the hill,
Some day as the sun goes down,
And the wind, blowing strong and chill,
Drives out the ships from the town!
Yes! the wind on the hill for me,
And the mists may lie below;
There's a glad light over the sea,
And a secret for me to know!

OLD BATTLE FIELDS.

Long years of peace have stilled the battle thunder,
While grasses quiver where the fight was won,
Masses of blossom, lightly blown asunder,
Drop down white petals on the silent gun:
For life is kind and sweet things grow unbidden,
Turning the scenes of strife to bloomy bowers:
One only knows what secrets may be hidden
Beneath this cloud of flowers.

Poor heart, above thy field of sorrow sighing
For smitten faith and hope untimely slain,
Leave thou the soil wherein thy dead are lying
To the soft sunlight and the cleansing rain:
Love works in silence, hiding all the traces
Of bitter conflict on the trampled sod,
And time shall show thee all life's battle places
Veiled by the hand of God.

Select Story.

AMICE'S WEDDING DAY.

I was always glad when my rounds happened to lead through Sandridge by the Sea; there were many places where I met with kind friends enough, who were pleased to see an old peddler, who had served them for ever so many years, since they were children themselves some of them, but somehow I liked the tramp to Sandridge best of all my journeys.

It was a queer little village; one straggling main street leading up from the shore, with the fisherman's huts one built upon another, up the cliff, until it made you wonder how you ever got into them at all.

It was surprising to find how ready the Sandridge people were to buy my goods, too; I always took a large assortment there, and chose the brightest colors to please the fishergirls, who like to be gaily dressed when they can, and don't grudge what money they spend on themselves neither. But there was one cottage in Sandridge where my gaudy wares fell rather flat, but I was always sure of a bright, sunny welcome, and I usually made my way there first of all.

It was a steepish walk up the cliff to Ben Ryder's cottage, and I was always glad when I reached the top, and saw Amice standing in the doorway laughing at my efforts to struggle up. Beautiful Amice Ryder she was called, and rightly enough to my mind. She wasn't pretty like many of the Sandridge girls were; she was too big and quiet looking for mere prettiness; she was just beautiful, neither more nor less, and she didn't need gay clothes to show it off neither. Folks called her proud, but she was never proud to me, but used to laugh at me and bid me welcome, as though I had been a King, instead of a twopenny halfpenny peddler.

One bright spring day I came to Sandridge in the afternoon, and as I neared the place I stopped to speak to an old comrade of mine, who was breaking stones by the roadside.

"Any news up yon?" I asked, when we had passed the time of day to each other.

"News!" he grunted, wiping his mouth with the back of his hand; "news, you say? Well, there's more news than I care for, anyhow," and then resumed work.

"Come, Sammy," I said, laying down my pack, you're "put out a bit. What's up?"

"What's up," he repeated—he always had such a tiresome way of doing that, had Sam Penfold—"well, a billet's up.

"What's that?" I asked.

"Why, just this: They ain't got room for the soldiers that are quartered at Ley, so they've handed them on to us; and neither with yer leave or by yer leave, in stalks a big six-foot fellar, right into yer house, with a paper in his hand. 'That's his billet,' says he, and there stays as from you please, whether you want him or no.

I laughed, an ex-s grievances, and reshouldering my pack, prepared to walk on.

"Going to Ben Ryder's?" asked Sam with a parting grunt.

"Aye."

"Then you won't get lodgings there," he said, with grim satisfaction; "he's got a billet, too.

Somehow I did not like the idea of a rough soldier being quartered at Ryder's house, though it was no business of mine. It didn't seem altogether right of Ben towards his motherless girl, but p'raps it wasn't any fault of his.

Anyhow, I would wait before I came to any hasty conclusion on the subject.

Up the cliff I toiled with my load, and as I neared the top Amice came out to meet me as usual, but whether it was funny or not I couldn't tell, her face seemed to look paler and graver than it used to. She wore her usual fishgirl's dress of coarse homespun, but stuck in the front of it was a cream colored rose, a thing I never saw Amice wear before in my life. She wasn't given to frippery of any sort.

"Come in, Paul" she said, holding out her hand towards me. "You're as tired as can be, I'm sure."

Just the same welcome as ever; but there was something in the ring of her voice that told me I wasn't altogether wanted there that day, or at least I thought so. However, sitting down on the porch, I stopped on for some little time, making her tell me all the gossip of the village. Of course, the arrival of the soldiers came up among other things and by the flush that overspread the girl's pale cheek, as she told me this bit of news, I felt sure that the mischief was done, and that Amice Ryder was heart whole no longer.

"Did your soldier give you that rose, my lass?" I asked suddenly.

For the first time in my life I saw Amice angry. She did not vouchsafe any answer to my question, but rising from her seat, she turned abruptly away and bolted herself in the house, getting some refreshments ready for me, which I hardly deserved after my impertinence.

As I smoked my pipe peacefully in the porch, I thought it all over, and made up my mind it was nothing to do with me if Amice had a lover. Her father could look after her interests better than I could; only soldiers were such queer chaps; they so often pretended what they never meant, and I was too fond of Amice to see her treated that way.

Suddenly, as I sat in the quiet spring sunshine, I saw a man toiling up the ascent that led to Ryder's cottage. His red coat hanging on his arm showed him to be a soldier. His hat was off and I could see his face distinctly.

"Amice," I called out, loudly, "Amice, come here." Then as she neared me, I continued: "Is you the man that is quartered here, at your father's house?"

For a moment she looked out a little anxiously; then said, quickly: "Yes, that's him, Paul."

Without another word I left her and walked down the steep road to within a short distance of the approaching figure; then I stopped dead and waited for the man to come towards me. He was looking down on the ground as he swung himself up the steep way. Suddenly he raised his eyes and they met mine full. Ah, me, how his face changed as he did so!

"What do you want now?" he gasped out.

"Only to let you know that I am here, and can guess the game that you are playing," I returned. "As long as you remember that, you're safe from me. Forget it, and I shall keep silence no longer."

With a rough laugh, he turned away, and left me standing alone; then I slowly remounted the rocky path, with a heavy weight at my heart, and prepared myself for what I could say to the girl who was waiting for my return above. She stood watching me from the porch, where the roses were growing in their wild beauty, and I could see a wondering sort of look in her face as I came near her; but she never spoke a word nor asked a single question. I was a bit out of breath after my tug up-hill, and as what I had to say wanted all the calmness and quietness I could muster, I waited silent for a time; then took her hand in my withered one.

"Amice, my lass," I said. "I've known you since you were a wee thing toddling about here, and seen you grow into the woman you are with near as much pride as your father could do, and on the strength of that old friendship I want you to make me a promise."

No answer, only she held her head a bit higher, and looked me straight in the face unflinchingly.

"Will you grant an old man's whim, Amice?" I said again.

"I must wait until I hear what it is first, Paul," she replied.

"Well, it's this. I've a fancy, a strange fancy, to be one of the guests at your wedding, Amice, and the promise I want from you is this: five days before your marriage send me word to come to it."

She laughed merrily, her old unconscious laugh, that somehow it hurt me to hear.

"Oh, you silly old Paul," she said, blushing slightly, "is that all you've been making such a mystery about? Well—yes, I promise."

I looked at her earnestly. "Amice," I said, "you've given me your promise, and I trust you. Whatever persuasion you may get to the contrary, you give me your honest word that old Paul, the peddler, shall come to your wedding?"

"Yes," she said, "I do Paul, really and truly."

And then I was satisfied, for I knew a girl with such truthful eyes as hers couldn't stoop to deceit.

After telling her how to let me know when I was wanted, so seriously that she again began to laugh at me, I left the cottage, refusing all her invitations to stay, for I knew the same roof couldn't shelter me and the man she had chosen for her lover, without some harm coming of it. So I went down into the village for the night, and tramped next day, feeling more downcast than I had ever done before at leaving Sandridge behind me.

Only a few months passed away before the summons I had been fearing came. Amice was going to be married, and wrote to bid me come to the wedding. As luck would have it, the message was delayed, notwithstanding all my care that it should be forwarded to me directly it reached the place I had told Amice to send it to, and I only got it a day and a half before the affair came off.

There were few railroads in those days remember, so I had to start on foot, and walk day and night in order to reach Sandridge in time; and a heavy jaunt it was, for I was none so young as I used to be. At last the wearisome journey neared its end, and the little fishing village came in sight, lying quietly among the hills in the late autumnal sunshine. I did not wait to get up to Ben Ryder's cottage, for I could tell by the way most of the houses were deserted, and by the aspect of the women who remained, standing at their house doors, that a wedding party had gone into the church, and that they were waiting their return.

Many greetings met my ears, and many a laugh was raised at my sorry appearance, for I looked travel-stained and weary enough, I warrant.

At last I reached the little lych-gate leading into the old churchyard, and there my spirit almost failed me, for on the ground lay the pretty flowers that the children had thrown before the bride as she walked up the path. But nerving myself for what was before me I entered the open door almost unnoticed. Then I saw Amice as she stood in her soft gray gown with her beautiful head drooping on to her breast, I only looked at her I say, and the sight gave me courage; no man living should harm her while I lived to prevent it, but my task was a hard one for all that. Stepping forward through the little crowd of villagers that looked on, open-mouthed, to see me, I made my way toward the group in the chancel.

"Stop!" I called out aloud, holding up my hand. "This wedding must not go on."

Amice, I know, looked up at me with a look I shall never forget, but it was too late to heed that now.

"For what reason am I to stop?" said old Parson Leigh, who was a-marrying them, startled by my voice, and not knowing how to act.

"Because," I said, covering my eyes with my hands, to shut Amice's face from my sight, "because that man is my son, and he's married already!"

"Is this true?" says Parson Leigh, his voice shaking a little with the sorrow he felt for the girl, whom he had known since she was a baby, and turning to the man who stood before him.

"It's just a downright lie, sir," he said, simply enough, "and I'm ready to prove it. My father's here to speak for himself, and Heaven knows why any one should want to come between Amice and me like this."

I looked up bewildered as the man spoke, and then in an instant the awful mistake I had made flashed across my mind; this was not the man I had seen coming up to Ben Ryder's house at all; this was not my son, but a younger man, but different in every way to that poor wandering fellow. For a minute some thing seemed to come into my throat and prevent me from speaking. But presently the words came: "I withdraw what I said entirely, sir," I said, solemnly, "and I humbly ask pardon for the mistake I made, which I will explain later on."

Then falling back into the ranks of the astonished lookers-on, I listened to the words that made Amice Ryder a happy wife, wondering, with a sad heart, whether she would ever forgive the blunder I had made in my effort to secure her happiness.

She was very pale and still, and a tear trembled on her cheek, but she made her answers in a low, clear voice, that seemed full of trust and hope. At length the bells in the old tower rang out, and the wedding party began to prepare for starting, but I hung back, ashamed to meet Ben Ryder or his daughter, and still more ashamed to meet the gossiping folk who had heard all I said. But Amice had not forgotten me, she saw me watching her from the back of the church, and came forward directly on her husband's arm.

"Come home with us, Paul," she said gently, "I want you." And notwithstanding the queer looks given me by her soldier, I followed them at a distance toward the old home.

Outside the cottage I stopped, and beckoned the two out into the golden sunlight.

"Amice," I said, humbly enough, "I have to ask your pardon for my behavior towards you and yours this day. The man who lodged at your father's house was my son, and it never entered into my stupid head that it might be an other soldier who was courting you. I only thought of him, and, knowing his ways, made up my mind to save you from him, though he were a dozen times my son. He has never caused me anything but trouble since he was a lad, and such trouble should never cross your path by one of mine. It is on his account I have to tramp the country, from year's end to year's end, and it is on his account I dare not settle in one place, knowing that he would only bring disgrace on me if I did so. It is from this man I tried to save you, and you must forgive a half-blind old man's mistake, when you remember how hard it was for a father's heart to denounce his own son. Now, good-bye, and heaven bless you both."

The tears stood in Amice's eyes; she always had a feeling heart, and she saw now I was well nigh overdone. She would not have me say good bye, but pressed me to join them at their simple wedding feast. But I said no, and kept to it. Somehow it would have jarred on me to be there. I had had happier days myself, but they were gone and the shadows that fell round me should have no place amid their innocent mirth. So I shouldered my pack and walked off down the hill towards the town. Once I looked back and saw my girl following me with her eyes full of pity, so I turned and waved my hat cheerily enough; then she spoke a word to her soldier husband, and he nodded his head and laughed, so she just ran after me, and putting her arms around my neck, kissed my weather-beaten cheek gently. Then I had to make off as quick as possible, for fear an old man's salt tears should bring ill luck to Amice's wedding day.—Household Words.

Not Always a Remedy.

There was a group of gentlemen sitting in a drug store last Sunday morning discussing smallpox. Gilhooly was there, too. The doctor remarked what a blessing science was, and how the lives of so many thousands and tens of thousands of human beings had been saved by vaccination alone; that vaccination never failed to save a man's life.

"That may all be so," remarked Gilhooly, "but in the case of my uncle, his life was saved by his not being vaccinated. He lived in California, and the smallpox was very bad, and all that saved his life was his refusal to get vaccinated. If he had got vaccinated it would have cost him his life."

"That must have been a very singular case. I wish you would give me the precise data," said the doctor, taking out his note book.

"Not at all. He was in jail, and the vigilants broke in and took him out of jail, and were about to hang him to a tree, when they discovered he was all broken out with the smallpox. They scattered like a covey of partridges. The further proceedings were postponed instead of limy uncle, and his life was saved. Now, you will acknowledge, doctor, that if he had been vaccinated he could not possibly have taken the smallpox, and if he had not had the smallpox at the time he would certainly have lost his life; so in this case, at least, you will admit that vaccination would have cost him his life."

Some Odd Accidents.

At Pine Bluff, Ark., a sheriff's posse surrounded the residence of a desperate thief. He jumped from a window and ran for the woods. One pursuer outstripped his fellows, and the next fleetest mistook him for the thief and shot him.

At Rock Castle, Ky., as the Rev. Mr. Perry entered a house, a hen flew in and perched on a hanging rifle; it fell, and falling on the lock was discharged, and killed the minister.

At Kansas City, as a man was sitting on the balcony of his house, a steamboat ran into it and crushed him to death. (This was during the April floods.)

At Baltimore, a man who was being shaved, heard a runaway, and, thinking it was his team, jumped up, and had his nose nearly cut off.

At Canton, O., James Little, drank some cold beer, which paralyzed his stomach, and, forming carbonic acid gas in his whole system, causing nearly instantaneous death.

At West Point, Lieutenant Archibald Gibson could not, while on parade, lift his hand to remove a spider from his ear for a whole hour. When parade was dismissed his ear was full of blood. The insect was only taken out two days later and Lieutenant Gibson ultimately died of inflammation of the brain.

At Charleston, Mass., Alfred Anderson crawled into a sand house he had built, and it fell in on him and smothered him.

At Nanticoke, Pa., John Lafschuski broke a bottle of whiskey in his pocket, saturating his clothes; when he subsequently lit a match, they took fire and he was fatally burned.

In Adair county, Mo., two young men agreed to be photographed with pistols drawn on each other. The artist, while arranging its position, discharged one of the pistols, shooting the opposite sitter through the lungs.

At Eastport, Me., a sailor wanting a drink of water, and finding the cask pump frozen, poured hot water into it, and while attempting to suck a drink from it inhaled the steam and was scalded to death.

At Pittsburg, Mike Maroney entered a core oven in a foundry to warm himself, and another workman placed a core on the truck, ran it in, closed the door, and roasted him alive.

At Rixford, Pa., Louis Garthwait lowered a forty quart torpedo of nitroglycerine into a well, when the well made a sudden flow, struck the torpedo and blew him to pieces.

At Green Ridge, Pa., John Thompson and brother tried to stop a dogfight and the latter threw a stone at the animals and, missing them, smashed his brother's skull.

At St. Louis, Thomas J. Wharton, jr., took up a large oyster, said: "This is the kind of oyster Walter Brooks choked to death on!" tried to swallow it, and was choked to death.

At Creedmoor, a cherry pit was snapped at Lieut. W. A. Moore, and hit him in the eye. It struck the optic nerve, causing paralysis and congestion of the brain and he had a narrow escape from death.

At Indianapolis, the weight of a cask of water smashed the teeth of a "Man with the Iron Jaw," and falling on his breast it crushed him to death.

At Dovercourt, England, a boy named Boast swallowed the sting of a wasp while eating some preserves, and died while running to the doctor's.

At Boston, Simeon Long, while playing with the cat in his hallway, made a misstep and fell against the wall and broke his neck.

At Dublin, Ga., a chimney swallow filled the muzzle of William Sugg's gun with clay and when he discharged it the weapon blew off his hand.

At Neodesha, Minn., Albert Grant was playing with a Newfoundland dog and dragging it by the tail, when it jumped into the pond, pulling him in, and he was drowned.

Scandinavian Hospitality.

The most striking quality of Scandinavian character seems to be hospitality. Throughout Norway, Sweden, and the far North the author was heartily received by every one, from the king in his palace to the Laplander in his tent. During five years of almost incessant travel, in the course of which every part of the peninsula was visited Mr. Du Chaillu was coolly treated only once. The Swedes and Norwegians have the reputation of being reserved and cold, but this is true of them only when they meet strangers of the class best suggested by the word "tourist." To any one whose interest in them can not be measured by a stare or two and a few impertinent questions they are unsuspicious and communicative, as well as cordial to the verge of affection. Mr. Du Chaillu went among them freely, conversed with them in their language, wore garments like their own, and took part in their labors, sports, and ceremonies. The treatment he received in return, causes him to speak most enthusiastically in praise of their sociability and kindness.

As in all other countries that retain primitive habits, hospitality in Scandinavia always implies eating and drinking. The poorest farmer or fisherman always has something to offer the visitor, and lack of appetite is generally construed as a slight. The author mentions one occasion on which, to avoid hurting any one's feelings, he ate thirty times in two days, and drank thirty-four cups of coffee. Often strong cheese is offered just before a meal to provoke appetite, and in the cities a formal dinner is preceded by a "smorgas" or lunch, at a table crowded with alleged appetizers. On a single "smorgas" table the author noted smoked reindeer meat, smoked salmon with poached eggs, raw salmon freshly salted, hard-boiled eggs, caviare, fried sausage, anchovy, smoked goose breast, cucumbers, raw salt herring, several kinds of cheese and as many of bread, and a salad made of pickled herring, boiled meat, potatoes, eggs, beets, and onions. There were also three kinds of spirits on the table, and from these and the various dishes, the guests helped themselves bountifully, and then did justice to an excellent dinner.—John Habberton, in Harpers Magazine for November.

Mrs. Lucy E. McCormick, Covington, Ky., writes: "My constitution was completely shattered by rheumatism. I suffered intensely; stimulants only gave me temporary relief. I tried Brown's Iron Bitters. It has cured me completely, and I believe permanently. After using two bottles, I felt better and stronger than ever I did in all my life before."

A BAPTIST MINISTER'S EXPERIENCE.

I am a Baptist Minister, and before I even thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine, but left a lucrative practice for my present profession, 40 years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy; Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured me. I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas' Eclectric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria, and Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured them, and if taken in time, it will cure seven times out of ten. I am positive it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough; if any one will take a small teaspoon and half fill it with the oil, and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and dra

The Columbian.

G. E. ELWELL, J. E. SITTENDENDER, } Editors.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, Nov. 4, 1881.

LAST WORDS.

Before the next issue of the COLUMBIAN the battle for Democratic supremacy will have been fought in Pennsylvania. Whether Orange Noble will be chosen State Treasurer on Tuesday next, depends upon the Democratic voters of the Commonwealth. If they do their duty and go to the polls, it is reasonably certain that the machine candidate will be defeated and the treasury placed in the hands of an honest and capable official. The candidacy of Wolf from the beginning was seriously detrimental to Baily, and the steady increase in number of the followers of the sturdy little Independent has reduced to a minimum Baily's chances of election. Under these circumstances it is more than ever important that the full Democratic vote should be polled. Apathy alone can defeat Noble, and surely Democrats are not willing to let a victory go by default. A few earnest men in each township can get every voter to the polls next Tuesday. There are in every community, well meaning men who are neglectful of political matters, and who too frequently refrain from voting, excepting perhaps in Presidential years, unless some zealous neighbor urges them to deposit their ballots. Visit all such men and persuade them to accompany you to the polls. Should there be in your neighborhood any discontented Republicans, induce them if possible to vote with you. Do not postpone depositing your ballot until late in the day. Vote early and then devote as much of your time as you can spare to seeing that your neighbors vote.

Mr. Noble was fairly nominated and is entitled to all the Democratic votes in the State. Let us do our duty in Columbia county, at least, and roll up a rousing majority both for the State and county ticket. Success next Tuesday will strengthen the party and make future victories more certain. The desperate struggle now in progress in the Republican ranks threatens to divide that party permanently. A Democratic triumph now will still further demoralize the warring factions.

We earnestly appeal to the Democrats of the county to cast their votes next Tuesday for all the nominees of the party. Go to the polls unless sickness prevents. Your business is not so pressing that you cannot exercise your rights as a citizen and give an hour to help your party.

Vote for Noble and the whole local ticket and let Columbia county show 2000 Democratic majority.

See that your ticket is straight, before voting.

There has been quite a demand of late for confederate bonds and the reason therefor was not at first understood. It is now said that $17,000,000 in gold was placed in English banks by the Confederate authorities during the war and still remains on deposit. Efforts have been made by the Treasury department to obtain possession of this money, but the English bankers have held that it could only be paid to holders of the bonds. It is one of the queer features of finance that these bonds, which have long been selling at about two cents on the dollar, should come to be of value once more. Stranger yet is the fact, that this trifling redemption fund of only seventeen millions of dollars should have been overlooked all these years. Those people who bought bonds simply as "relics of the war," are decidedly in luck.

Ever since Orange Noble was nominated for State Treasurer, the Erie Herald has promised to prove all sorts of direful charges against that gentleman. It hasn't done so yet, and election day is close at hand. The Herald has contained any number of statements adverse to Mr. Noble, but assertion is not proof by a long shot. It calls Mr. Noble a monopolist because he is president of a bank, but does not mention that he is opposed by all the giant corporations which are the true monopolies in this State. It is not at all likely that the Herald will materially lessen the vote of Mr. Noble, but quite likely that the abuse showered upon him will increase the number of his friends.

Circuses have had a hard time this season in the coal regions, many of their performances having been followed by riotous proceedings in which men were beaten and occasionally killed. The shows are faring no better in the South, if we may judge from a recent experience in Georgia. In a fight after the performance one negro was killed and others badly beaten and two of the circus men were shot. Circus proprietors may find it necessary to include a Gatling gun and a supply of breech loading rifles among their paraphernalia, if the authorities cannot protect them.

A fast express train has just been placed in service to run between New York and Chicago, via. Philadelphia and Harrisburg, making the trip in twenty-five hours. The train will be composed entirely of Pullman parlor, dining room and sleeping coaches and will make faster time than has ever been made between the two cities. The demand for increased speed and consequent saving of time has become so urgent that the railroad company has been compelled to undertake this new venture. That it will prove successful hardly admits of a doubt.

The Richmond, Va. newspapers charge that the Ninth Massachusetts regiment during their recent visit to Yorktown were guilty of violent and disgraceful acts, assaulting women, destroying property, &c. A staff and line officer have been sent to Richmond to investigate the charges. The "culchawed" people of Boston ought to protect the honor of their city and State by insisting upon the punishment of the offenders if found guilty.

Wolfe's candidacy has brought to light a capacity for lying on the part of Republican organs, for which even their staunchest admirers had never given them credit. One of their latest dodges is to invent speeches derogatory of Mr. Noble and credit them to Democrats. This is ingenious and does the Democratic candidate no harm.

See that your ticket is straight, before voting.

MAHONE WINS A TRICK.

The Senate last Saturday, adjourned sine die and in the closing hours a just rebuke was administered to Senator Mahone. The postmaster at Lynchburg, Va., is a Republican named Wilson, who had served in the army and is a capable official. Mahone desired his removal, and the appointment of one Statham, an alleged Democrat of the Mahone stripe. This appointment was vigorously opposed and the matter was laid aside by an unanimous vote. Democratic Senators were not in favor of the change and some of the Republicans were disgusted. As was predicted, the Republicans in the Senate are beginning to find that Mahone is an expensive luxury, not worth the price paid for him. Doubtless the renegade Repudiator was highly incensed at the failure of his plans, but his disappointment was brief. The President came to his relief as soon as the Senate adjourned, removed Wilson and appointed Statham. This settles Arthur's position as regards the Repudiationists of Virginia. He evidently intends to lend the power of his administration to Mahone and his allies, and commit the Republican party to the support of the repudiation scheme. This will be a bitter pill for many good Republicans to swallow, and it will not be a matter of surprise if they positively refuse to take the dose.

ANOTHER CRANK.

To the number of "cranks" in the land there seems to be no end. The one last reported is Dr. John Noetling, formerly a resident of Mifflinburg, Union county, who has long been afflicted by attacks of insanity. He is a fine looking, powerfully built man and dresses neatly. While a resident of Mifflinburg, he made several attempts to take the life of his wife, and she obtained a divorce on those grounds. On several occasions he made large demands on the Mifflinburg banks, claiming that he had large deposits in them, writing out his checks in the name of "Almighty God," the "Holy Spirit," etc., showing conclusively that he labored under mental hallucinations at certain periods. He had his lucid intervals, however, when he remained quiet and inoffensive. He is said to have led a sober and industrious life and was well disposed when free from the periodical attacks referred to.

On Monday night he endeavored to force his way into the White House, demanding to see the "accounts of the President." The doorkeeper seized him and a desperate struggle ensued, ending in the overpowering of the lunatic. He was armed with a large sized seven chambered revolver, with every barrel loaded. He had a letter addressed to John Waling, stating that Dr. John Noetling was lawfully elected President and signed "Almighty God." With such dangerous maniacs roaming through the country, the office of President will soon come to be considered a perilous position. No one knew how many lunatics there were in the land until Garfield's assassination brought them to the surface.

NEW CABINET OFFICERS.

On Thursday, of last week, the following nominations were sent to the Senate and promptly confirmed: Charles J. Folger, as Secretary of the Treasury, Thomas L. James as Postmaster General, and Frank Hatton, editor of the Burlington Hawkeye, as First Assistant Postmaster General to succeed J. N. Tyner, resigned. Mr. James was re-nominated to avoid possible legal questions as to his continuance in office under his first confirmation. This will be a severe blow to the Star route thieves, as it indicates an intention on the part of the President to prosecute the suits against them.

Judge Folger, the new Secretary of the Treasury, was born in Nantucket, Mass., April 16th, 1818, and removed to New York when only twelve years of age. He early adopted the profession of the law and attained a high position. At the age of 26 he was appointed a county judge. In 1851 he was elected to the same office. He was State Senator for five successive terms. In 1867, he was appointed assistant treasurer of the United States in New York City; in 1870 was elected associate justice of the Court of Appeals, the highest judicial body in the State, and in 1880 was elected chief justice of that court. Mr. Folger was a Democrat until 1856, since which time he has acted with the Republicans and of late has been classed with the Stalwart faction. He is now in his 64th year and it is thought will be conservative in his management of the Treasury Department. His ability as a lawyer is unquestioned, but his reputation as a financier is yet to be made. He is honest, of unblemished character, and of undoubted mental force and vigor.

Democrats Arouse!

ROOMS OF THE DEMOCRATIC STANDING COMMITTEE,
BLOOMSBURG, PA., Nov. 2, 1881.

TO THE VOTERS OF COLUMBIA COUNTY:

Again we are on the eve of an important election, and we are called upon to exercise the rights and privileges of American freemen. The prize for which we should struggle, is the State Treasurer, and by united, earnest effort on behalf of our party, there is no doubt of the triumphant election of Orange Noble, the Democratic nominee. Mr. Wolfe, the independent Republican candidate is making havoc in the ranks of their party and we only need poll a full Democratic vote to insure success. There is an earnest desire among the people of this Commonwealth to throw off the Cameron yoke, and breathe the pure air of political freedom, and in order to accomplish it, thousands of Republicans have concluded to vote either for Noble or Wolfe. Never since the Republican party came into power have we had such an opportunity to deal them a fatal blow. With a Democratic majority at this election of two thousand, and the defeat of Baily, the Republican nominee, and the election of Noble, our party will be in splendid condition to elect a Democratic Governor in 1882, which will pave the way to carry the State at the next Presidential election. But one thing is necessary to success, and that is, get out the vote.

Our local ticket is a good one, and with the exception of Register and Recorder, there is no opposition, and that should not be countenanced by the Democracy of Columbia county. Mr. Jacoby, the independent candidate has, no reason to complain. The party has been exceedingly kind to him. For twenty-five years the Democracy has supported him either as a publisher of a democratic paper, a member of the Legislature, or Register and Recorder. The emoluments of his offices alone were not less than thirty thousand dollars. Of him it can truthfully be said, he has had a goodly heritage. We do not wish to be unjust, but duty to our position and justice to our organization demands that we speak plainly. When Mr. Jacoby announced his name as a candidate under our rules, he pledged his honor as a man to abide by the result, and among all the candidates he is the only man to bolt, thereby violating a pledge which every honorable man is bound to keep inviolate. There is no question about the nomination being a fair one. Mr. Sterner was nominated on the first ballot, receiving a majority of the whole conventional vote, in other words, the people nominated him themselves. The convention had nothing to do but count the vote and declare the result. The vote stood thirty-seven for Sterner and twenty for Jacoby. Three years ago when they were both candidates, Jacoby received just enough votes to nominate him over Sterner, yet he gave Mr. Jacoby a hearty support.

The only reason assigned for bolting is that he has given satisfaction, and that Mr. Sterner is not fit for the office. Col. Freeze, his immediate predecessor, gave entire satisfaction, and yet he never dreamed of having a life tenure, but unlike Mr. Jacoby, he felt it his duty to contribute liberally to the success of the party. As to the fitness of Sterner, all we have to say is that by perseverance and economy he has succeeded in obtaining a good education; he is sober and industrious, and is not ashamed to make an honest living by manual labor. For five years in succession, he taught the same school in this town, giving entire satisfaction, and only relinquished it on being nominated for Register. It is not necessary to say anything in reference to his standing further than at the late delegate election in this town, where they are both known and reside, Mr. Sterner carried the town and Mr. Jacoby's own ward by overwhelming majorities.

Fellow Democrats, allow Mr. Jacoby to succeed in his selfish ends, and all further use of the organization will have come to an end. Let it be understood that the interests of one man are as naught in the balance against the organization of the Democratic party in this county.

In conclusion, let us urge upon you the importance of going to the polls early. See to it that your neighbor gets to the election, and that all vote for Noble and the whole county ticket. If we work shoulder to shoulder success will crown our efforts.

A RUINED BANK.

The biggest and most complete financial disaster of the year occurred on Monday last. The Mechanics' National Bank, of Newark, the largest in New Jersey, closed its doors on that day in consequence of the statements made by O. L. Baldwin, the cashier, to the effect that the liabilities were so great that it would be useless to continue in business. The directors and the community were astonished by the news, as the bank had always been considered perfectly sound. Baldwin ranked high as a financier and managed all the affairs of the bank, the president, Joseph A. Halsey, having long been confined to the house by the infirmities of age. The capital of the bank was $500,000, and its surplus $466,000. Baldwin informed the directors that all the resources of the bank were gone, except the building valued at $50,000. It is believed that the actual loss will reach $2,600,000. Baldwin states that about 1873 he began loaning the bank's money to C. Nugent & Co., morocco manufacturers of New York and continued to do so, until the loans aggregated $2,000,000. Nugent says the amount discounted by the bank for his firm is only $160,000. Baldwin has speculated in Wall street for several years and it is believed that the money has been lost in that way. Both Baldwin and Nugent have been arrested and placed under $25,000 bail each. Among the depositors were, the State Banking Company $75,000, the Acqueduct Board $27,000, the Water Board $136,000, the city and county $40,000. The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company was a large depositor. A more utter smash it would be difficult to imagine, and it serves to show how culpably careless are the directors of banks in permitting one man to manage all the business without constant supervision.

A Tombstone, Arizona, dispatch says: Ike and Bill Clandon and Frank and Tom McLowrey had been parading the town several days drinking hard and making themselves obnoxious, when the city marshal arrested Ike Clandon. Soon after his release the four met the marshal and his brothers. The marshal ordered them to give up their weapons when a fight commenced and about thirty shots were rapidly fired. Both the McLowrey boys were killed, Bill Clandon was mortally wounded, dying soon after. Ike Clandon was slightly wounded in the shoulder. Wyatt, one of the marshal's brothers, was slightly wounded. The others were unhurt.

WISE WORDS OF A WILLING WITNESS.

At the close of a mass meeting, according to the report of the same published in a La Grange paper, reference was made to the phenomenal efficacy of St. Jacobs Oil in the many painful diseases, to which mankind is subject. We refer to the above as showing how strong a hold the Old German Remedy for Rheumatism has on the experience and good wishes of the great public.

The steamer Jennie Gilchrist started from Rock Island Ills. on the night of October 27th carrying twenty three passengers and fifteen of a crew. A portion of the machinery broke and the boat was dashed against the bridge spanning the Mississippi between Rock Island and Davenport, Iowa. Seventeen lives were lost. The accident is entirely attributable to the drunkenness of the crew. There was a large quantity of whiskey in the cargo and this was liberally tapped. The boat was not licensed to carry passengers.

MIRACULOUS CURE.

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium arsenic and corrosive sublimate as a matter of course. Had paid $100 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the Cuticura Resolvent internally, and the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. He did so and was completely Cured. The skin on his head, face, and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months. Reported by

SCROFULA SORE.

The Rev Dr. —— in detailing his experience with the Cuticura Remedies, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the Cuticura Resolvent internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since, an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good result, until I used the Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured me, so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.

POSITIVELY CURED BY

Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters.

Reasons Why Preferred to All Other Porous Plasters for External Use.

First.

Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination which acts with increased rubefacient, stimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.

Second.

Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.

Third.

Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once.

Fourth.

Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.

Fifth.

Because over 5000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters or medicines for external use.

Sixth.

Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters.

Stephen Collins is drawn as a juror for December court, the first colored man to serve in that capacity in this county.

The county offices are sure to be well filled the next term. All the Democratic nominees are certain to be elected, and they are all good men.

FOR SALE.—A Baltimore heater of late pattern. Used only a portion of two winters. Will be sold cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. tf

The annual meeting of the State Grange, Patrons of Husbandry of Pennsylvania, will be held in the city of Williamsport on the 13th of December.

It is reported that coal of good quality and in paying quantities has been found at Summit Station on the Catawissa Railroad, about eight miles from Ringtown.

Two boxes of clothing and twenty-seven dollars in money have been sent to the Mayor of Detroit by the committee of ladies for the benefit of the Michigan sufferers.

FOR SALE.—A three-horse power steam engine and boiler, in good condition. Suitable for running a printing press or other light machinery. Inquire at this office. tf

Harman & Hassert are kept busy constantly at their foundry and machine shop. Their excellent workmanship has built up a large business for them.

Rev. B. B. Hensbey, of Northumberland, will preach in the Baptist church, Bloomsburg, on Sunday next, and on every alternate Sunday until further notice.

Buckwheat cakes now come to the front.—Ex. [Yes, and people with limited bank accounts promptly step to the rear—in this county at least.

A water main burst on Fourth street, between Iron and Catharine streets, last Saturday afternoon. The repairs were not finished until an early hour on Sunday morning.

Rev. Father Fields, of Centralia, has been granted leave of absence for one year by Bishop Shannahan. He is an invalid and needs rest.

There was a meeting of the directors of the North & West Branch Railway Company, in the office of L. E. Waller, Esq., on Tuesday, to ratify certain business transactions made in building the road.

Well executed $20 bills have been circulated in New York city, and some of them will doubtless find their way into the country ere long. Be on the watch for them.

We were in error last week in stating that Dr. Reber had severed his connection with the Sanitarium. In consequence of the overcrowding of the institution, he is compelled to remove his family to his own house.

The sink hole dug to receive the water from our motor proved insufficient for that purpose. It filled up and caved in, and we are now compelled to lay a pipe to the Fourth street run before using water power.

Hon. Wm. Taylor, Boston, is well again. Completely cured of a scrofulous humor which poisoned his blood, covering his face and head with sores, by Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally.

If there is any good reason why a single candidate of the Democracy of this county ought not to be elected, it has not been made known. Every man was fairly and honestly nominated, and is entitled to an election.

Physicians say that scrofula cannot be eradicated; we deny it "in toto." If you go through a course of Burdock Blood Bitters, your blood will get as pure as you can wish. Price $1, trial size 10 cents.

People will take care now as to how they detach their postage stamps, for the post office department has just ruled that postage stamps with any fraction of them missing will no longer be accepted as prepayment of postage on the matter to which they are attached.

The only office over which there is much of a contest is that of Register and Recorder. There are four candidates, Sterner, regular Democrat; Ringler, Republican; Hicks, Prohibition, &c., and Jacoby, independent. Sterner will be elected. If you want to be on the winning side, vote for him.

In another column will be found the advertisement of Mr. L. T. Sharpless, who offers a large and carefully selected stock of goods at reasonable rates. He has just received a large assortment of seasonable articles to which he invites the attention of the people of the town and county. Call and see him before purchasing elsewhere.

There will be a shooting match at the house of Eli Robbins, near Jones' grist mill in Fishingcreek township on Wednesday, November 23rd, 1881. There will be twenty swarms of bees and the woodwork of a two-horse sled put up and shot for. The bees will be shot for with shot or ball as may be agreed upon by the sportsmen.

Do not pay any attention to circulars sent out on the eve of the election, making all sorts of charges of corruption and incapacity against any candidate on our ticket. Such documents are frequently used by a campaign, but it can generally be taken for granted that charges made too late to be denied before the polls open, are intended to deceive and mislead. Support the ticket.

[Danville, (Ill.) News.]

John Stein, Esq, City Brewer, referring to its valuable qualities said to a News representative: "I have used St. Jacob's Oil in my family and recommend it to my acquaintances. It has always given the best satisfaction and is truly a wonderful remedy.

The town of Pittston is smitten with the plague of small pox. No less than 104 cases are reported in and near the town and the disease appears to be on the increase. A meeting of the citizens was held on Tuesday to express indignation at the reckless carelessness of the authorities, who have failed to take measures for the public safety. There are several new cases in Wilkes-Barre, one being a teacher in a public school, who had kissed all the children under her charge just befoer her affliction was discovered. Bloomsburg is fortunately free from small pox, but our town authorities should be on the watch and adopt the most vigorous measures to stamp it out should it appear.

Anybody can catch a cold now. The trouble is to let go, like the man who caught the bear. We advise our readers to keep a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup handy.

The newspaper publishers of Towanda have signed an agreement not to furnish their respective journals to subscribers for less than $1.50 per year and have duly announced the fact. They have learned from sad experience that there is no money in the business at $1 per annum. The papers are all good and certainly worth to their readers the extra half dollar asked.

"The doctors said my wife had consumption. Tried 'Lindsey's Blood Searcher,' and she has better health than ever." G. H. Hubbard, Hampden, Ohio. nov4

A tramp answering to the name of John Williams was placed in the lockup Saturday night to await trial for larceny. He succeeded in setting fire to the building and the outside was pretty badly burned before it was discovered and put out. Monday morning he was brought before Justice Walker and sent to jail for stealing several articles about town and also for setting fire to the lockup. Williams has been carrying on his petty thieving operations at Bloomsburg and other points, and it is time a stop was put to his depredations. Williams is wanted at Berwick.—Shickshinny Echo

The rich flats between Kingston and Wilkes-Barre are admirably adapted to the growth of cabbage, and this year an unusually large number of the plants were set out. They failed to head, owing to the long and severe drought, and are now suffered to rot in the fields. As a result the air is poisoned by about the worst smell it is possible to imagine. So intolerable has this nuisance grown that some of the citizens of Wilkes-Barre have raised a purse to prosecute the cabbage growers on the flats and neglectful garden proprietors in the city, if the offending vegetables are not at once removed and the air allowed to become pure. There is certainly need of prompt and decisive action as all will agree who have traversed the Kingston flats within the past few days.

An opinion was filed in Scranton recently by President Judge Handley, which establishes a novel precedent in the construction of Pennsylvania Boards of Arbitration. A case was arbitrated there last June in which Mrs. Winton, wife of a prominent lawyer, acted as one of the arbitrators, and on that score Warren J. Woodward, son of the late Justice Woodward, took exception to the award, claiming that under the act of 1836 a woman could not act in such a capacity. The exception was argued before Judge Handley, by whom it was over-ruled. He cited numerous English precedents showing that under the act of William IV, from which the law of 1836 is taken, women frequently served on such boards and acted in other positions [illegible]

[illegible] and every day. I never got hold any medicine to my life that gave such universal satisfaction as Thomas' Eclectric Oil; the more you use it the more you like it. I had a [illegible] which it cured badly ulcerated, [illegible] and also threatened croup in my children it never fails to relieve."

Deaths.

Mrs. George Girton, who lived near the planing mill, died last Saturday after a brief illness, of typhoid fever. The funeral took place on Monday.

Mrs. Annie Turner, wife of Dr. Turner, died at the Sanitarium last Saturday evening, aged 43 years, 11 months and 7 days. She had long been a great sufferer from cancers and for the past two years had been confined to her bed. Death to her was a welcome visitor, ending a life of pain and sorrow and giving that relief from physical and mental suffering denied her while on earth. The remains were followed to the grave on Monday by many sorrowing friends.

On Friday last the interesting little daughter of Mrs. Jane Scott, fell a victim to croup. The funeral took place the following day, and after the services the mother was completely prostrated by grief. The child who was but two years of age, was the only daughter and greatly beloved. Mrs. Scott has the sincere sympathy of all who know her.

John Beagle, the well known miller, died at Mordansville on Friday last and was buried on Sunday.

Chickens Come Home to Roost.

Is it democratic for a man claiming to be a Democrat, when he does not get his choice of candidates nominated, to turn around and defeat the ticket? We think not. In other words, it is the duty of every Democrat to help elect his ticket at all times.—Bloomsburg correspondent of the News Item, Aug 5, 1880. Supposed to be W. H. Jacoby.

The fight may be brisk * * * * and we want all good, solid men, irrespective of party, to take off their coats and see if we can't slide the regular nominee in between the two sevens with that heavy, old-fashioned majority. It can be done if we all work as we should. At all events try it, and see if the stuffing can't be knocked out of some who are always so full of conceit as to think they can bolt and strike out as independent candidates and win. We don't want such men. Therefore lay them on the shelf for another purpose, if you can find any.—Bloomsburg correspondent of the News Item, Oct 30, 1879. Supposed to be W. H. Jacoby.

A man is a poor Democrat who will oppose a nomination simply because he did not succeed in getting on the ticket. There are some such men hanging around the Democratic party, and the sooner they are driven out the better it will be for the party. The Democratic organ should come down on them—like the Blizard—and thus end bolting and scratching of tickets. These disorganizers assume that it is all right to defeat a ticket, so long as the Democratic press acquiesces in the miserable work. Go on, if there is no end to the party.—Bloomsburg correspondent of the News Item, May 27, 1880. Supposed to be W. H. Jacoby.

BALM IN GILEAD.

There is a balm in Gilead to heal each gaping wound;
In Thomas' Eclectric Oil is found.
For internal and for outward use, you freely may apply it;
For all pain and inflammation you should not fail to try it.
It only costs a trifle, 'tis worth its weight in gold,
And by every dealer in the land this remedy is sold.

For Register and Recorder.

At the solicitation of many friends, irrespective of party, throughout the county, and knowing full well of the foul and unjust means employed by certain parties during the summer to bring about my defeat, I have decided to become a candidate for re-election to the office of Register and Recorder, the duties of which office I trust I have performed to the entire satisfaction of the people of the county. Hoping to receive a hearty support at the polls on Tuesday the 8th of November 1881, I remain,

Most Respectfully yours,
WILLIAMSON H. JACOBY.

Physicians Registered.

The following names of physicians have been entered upon the register in the Prothonotary's office, since those last published:

W. T. Vance, born in Mt. Pleasant township; graduated from the University of Maryland, Baltimore, March 4 1881; resides in Rohrsburg.

N. J. Hendershott, born in Bloomsburg; studied medicine in Georgetown Medical College, Washington D. C., and abandoned studies on account of ill health; is a druggist and resides in Bloomsburg.

Thomas C. McHenry, born in Greenwood township; graduated from the University of Michigan, March 30th 1870; resides in Benton.

Ralph M. Lashelle, born in Catawissa; has no diploma, but has taken two courses of lectures in Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, and will probably graduate this month; has practiced for eleven years; resides in Centralia.

David H. Montgomery born in Liberty township, Montour county; graduated from the Philadelphia College of Medicine, March 10th 1852; resides in Mifflinville.

See that your ticket is straight before voting.

All Hallow E'en.

Last Monday evening the boys of Bloomsburg amused themselves with the frolics which custom has sanctioned on Hallow E'en. Showers of corn were dashed against windows and doors, startling quiet people sitting within, gates were lifted from their hinges and carried away and the air resounded with shrill whistles and cat-calls, the signals for meetings of troupes of boys. So long as these sports do not result in injury to property, no one will find fault with them, but the boys should be careful not to do any damage. In one case at least an offence was committed which should never be repeated. One of the iron gates at Col. Freeze's residence was unhinged and then dropped upon the pavement with such force as to break it. Fun is all very well, but when it results in pecuniary loss to owners of property it is not well. The law makes no allowance for damage done in merrymaking, and offenders are liable to punishment. Have as much fun as you wish, boys, but let it be kept within such bounds that innocent persons shall not suffer in person or property. At the Normal School the scholars played many of the old-time games, such as, bobbing for floating apples in a tub of water, and spent a jolly evening. The pranks of the youngsters are not so boisterous as of old, and everybody is the better pleased that such is the fact.

Wedding Bells.

On Thursday afternoon at five o'clock the marriage of Miss Mary L. Elwell, daughter of Hon. William Elwell, and Mr. N. U. Funk was solemnized at St. Paul's Episcopal church, Rev. Louis Zahner officiating. The altar was decked with flowers and a floral yoke hung from the corona in the chancel. The bridesmaids were Miss M. Hartley of Bedford, Miss Maude Freeze of Bloomsburg and Miss Lizzie Buckingham of Harrisburg. Messrs. W. McK. Hess of Bloomsburg, Louis Dewart of Sunbury and I. Pardee of Hazleton acted as ushers. Mr. Leoni Mellick of Philadelphia was the bridegroom's best man and entered the chancel with him from the robing room. The bridal party marched up the main aisle in the following order: Mr. Hess and Miss Hartley, Mr. Dewart and Miss Freeze, Mr. Pardee and Miss Buckingham. Then came the bride leaning upon the arm of her father. The ceremony was performed at the chancel rail. Prof. Niles of the Normal School, presided at the organ, by request of the organist of St. Paul's.

The bride was attired in an exquisite dress of white satin and brocade, en traine, with Duchesse lace and wore orange blossoms and carnations. In her hand she carried a bouquet of choice flowers. The bridesmaids were robed in white mull, elaborately trimmed with lace and natural flowers, and carried balls of carnations.

The weather was inclement, but this did not deter the many friends of the bride and groom from attending the church, and bestowing their best wishes upon the happy pair.

A reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents on Third Street, from half past five until half past seven. The house was beautifully decorated with flowers and the rooms were crowded with friends, all anxious to tender congratulations upon the happy event which had brought two lives into the dearest and most sacred relations known upon earth.

The bridal gifts were many and valuable, embracing articles for use and ornament, and evidenced strongly the love and esteem of the givers. If hearty and sincere good wishes avail to make life happy, then have Mr. and Mrs. Funk a golden future before them. We are sure that no young couple ever embarked upon the sea of matrimony under more favorable auspices, and it is the hope of their many friends that no storm may ever disturb the serenity of their voyage.

A number of guests from a distance were present, among them being Mrs. Senator P. H. Smith, of Wisconsin, sister of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Elwell, of Towanda; Mrs. McK. Long, of Troy; Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Yorks, of Danville; T. R. Jordan, of Towanda; Mr. and Mrs. George Sanderson, jr., of Scranton.

Important to School Directors.

In the matter of application by residents of Hemlock township school district, to compel the school directors to make an arrangement for instructing the pupils of the petitioners in the Third Street school of the Town of Bloomsburg, Judge Elwell delivered an opinion on Monday, refusing to issue a mandamus, holding that the law conferred upon the school directors discretionary power upon the subject, and that they having deliberated upon the question and decided against the application, the Court has no power to compel them to reform their decision. When public officers are required to do an act which necessitates judgment and discretion, the Courts cannot dictate to them what their judgment shall be.

Badly Burned.

For several days past men have been hard at work at Neal's furnace removing the cinder and chilled metal from the stack. On Saturday afternoon John Bagle, the foreman of the works, was at the bottom of the stack, endeavoring to loosen with an iron bar, the roof-like formation known as scaffolding, and formed of iron, limestone, &c. Suddenly the mass gave way, and a shower of red-hot ashes fell upon Nagle, burning his face, breast, hands, arms, and one of his legs in a terrible manner. Medical assistance was summoned, and the proper remedies at once applied. The wounds are severe, but is believed will not result in permanent disfigurement or injury. Dr. McKelvy was the first to attend Nagle, but the case is now in the hands of Dr. Gardner, who is giving the requisite attention. It is fortunate that Nagle did not lose his life in the fiery shower that fell upon him. The work of cleaning out a stack is both onerous and dangerous and needs to be done with great care. Jonathan Cromis had one of his hands severely burned while at work in the stack on Monday.

Personal.

Miss Clementine Conner, and sister, of Orangeville, started last week for Elizabeth, City N. C., where they expect to visit their uncle, Smith Fowler, formerly of this county.

W. L. White, of Centre township, left Rupert Tuesday morning last for Atalissa, Iowa, where he will teach school during the winter and return in the spring.

Mr. James C. Brown was taken to his home in Mifflinville on Friday last, having acquired enough strength to warrant the drive. He has regained his appetite and it is believed will recuperate rapidly, though it will be some time before he is able to attend to business.

Messrs. Charles Parrish, W. J. Harvey, Irving A. Stearns, S. C. Struthers, Col. C. M. Conyngham and Attorney-General Palmer, all of Wilkes-Barre, and Thomas Beaver, of Danville, were in town on Tuesday, to attend a meeting of the North & West Branch Railway Company.

Dr. A. L. Cressler, an ex-member of the Legislature from Luzerne county, was in town on Tuesday. He now lives in Shippensburg, is devoting his time to the settlement of his father's estate, and has abandoned his practice as a physician. Thirty years ago he practiced medicine in Bloomsburg.

The Montour White Lead, Zinc and Color Works, of Rupert, Pa., have recently increased their facilities and put their mills in first-class working order and secured the services of W. E. B. Davies, of Philadelphia, an experienced practical painter and manufacturer as Superintendent. They have no hesitancy, therefore, to guarantee all the goods equal, if not superior to any in the market. Their motto is "QUALITY THE FIRST CONSIDERATION." They are now manufacturing pure ready-mixed and Pure Tinted Paste Paints from Pure Linseed Oil, White Lead, Zinc and Fine Colors. Car, Bridge, Ship and Roof Paints, Dry, in pure linseed oil and ready-mixed. Pure White Lead, Zinc, Colors, Pure Linseed Oil, Putty, &c., &c.

CUTLERY.

Everybody seems surprised at the extent of our stock of Cutlery. In no store in the county can such a variety of patterns be seen. In Scissors and Shears we have all sizes and at various prices according to quality, the better grades being our specialty. Pocket knives any quality from 10 cents to 4.50 each. The large quantities of fine Razors we sell is a strong recommendation as to their superiority. A lady's pride is her table and nothing adds more to its attraction than a handsome set of knives and forks, our line is large, new patterns and low prices for reliable goods.

We have just opened a handsome line of carving knives and forks, new designs with patent rests, prices from 50 cents to 4.50 per pair. Call and see them.

STOVES.

Cold weather is near at hand and already many are looking around for stoves. The manufacturers have been over-crowded with orders, and it is almost impossible to get them. We have already received several and are daily adding to our stock. Owing to the universal satisfaction the Argand has given we still keep it as our leading base heating stove, and if you wish to see a perfect beauty call and look at this year's pattern; a little high in price it's true, but in this age the people demand handsome stoves and the more handsome they are the more they cost. We have a variety of other very nice stoves at prices within the reach of all. The Gold Medal is the largest and handsomest base heating stove for the money brought to this town. In 1879 we introduced Spear's new Silver Moon Heater for heating two or more rooms and owing to the great satisfaction they have given, our trade has steadily increased on them. We warrant every one to give perfect satisfaction and have got to hear the first word of complaint or take one back. For ease of management, economy of fuel, great draft and radiating powers, they stand without an equal. Our long experience together with that of Mr. Issiah Hagenbuch, who has charge of our Stove and Tinware Department, has enabled us to study the wants of the people and make our selections accordingly. We cordially invite all in want of Stoves to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere, and examine our stock which we shall consider no trouble to show you. Stove repairs of all kinds furnished to order, grates and fire brick for the common cook stoves constantly on hand.

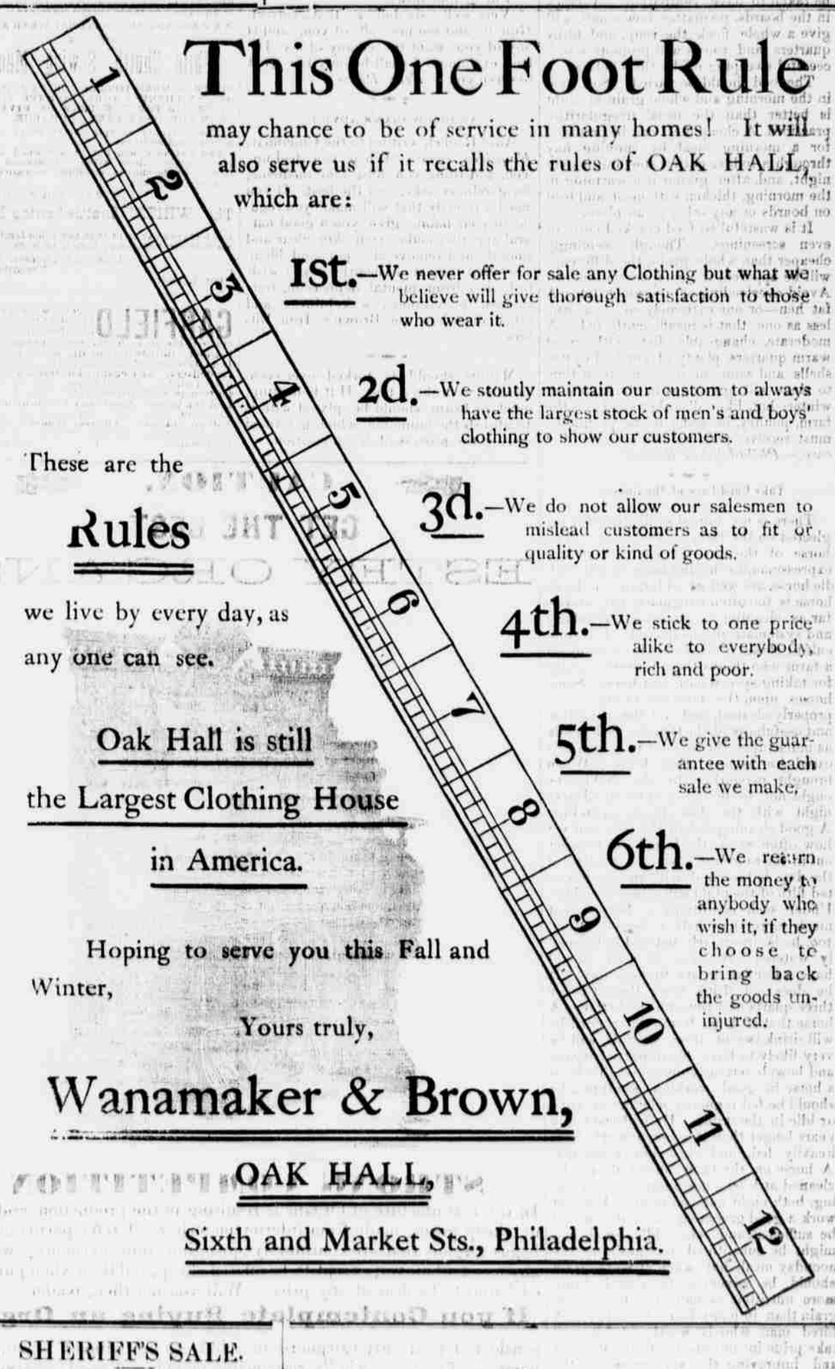
This One Foot Rule

may chance to be of service in many homes! It will also serve us if it recalls the rules of OAK HALL, which are:



1st.—We never offer for sale any Clothing but what we believe will give thorough satisfaction to those who wear it.

2d.—We stoutly maintain our custom to always have the largest stock of men's and boys' clothing to show our customers.

3d.—We do not allow our salesmen to mislead customers as to fit or quality or kind of goods.

4th.—We stick to one price alike to everybody, rich and poor.

5th.—We give the guarantee with each sale we make,

6th.—We return the money to anybody who wish it, if they choose to bring back the goods uninjured.

These are the Rules we live by every day, as any one can see.

Oak Hall is still the Largest Clothing House in America.

Hoping to serve you this Fall and Winter,

Yours truly,

Winter Layers.

Which is the best fowl for laying in winter? is an inquiry often made. Our reply is always that it is the fowl with the warmest quarters and good food. But as this is not what is desired to be known, the question cannot be evaded. We have tried this thing of experimenting for winter layers, and a "screw," as the detectives say has been found.

The first requisite is early hatching and early maturity. But if we are not able to make our hens lay and set early, we may not be fortunate enough to get early hatched pullets for a succeeding season. We can get early maturity, however, in the breed, and if we can have fowls matured before winter sets in, we will have eggs in winter, that is if we have been liberal in feeding them.

How can we get early maturity in the Brahma and Cochin? says an inquirer. If the object is eggs, and the purity of the breed undesirable, cross them with a Leghorn stock. Such a cross is an admirable one. We have known pullets of this cross to commence laying in October and keep it up until moulting the succeeding year. The cross reduces the Brahma size, injuring them somewhat as market chicks, but imparting a greater degree of vigor and stamina than is possessed by the parents.

The Plymouth Rocks are good winter layers, but, unless they are bred carefully, will disappoint those who try them. Being a "made" breed, if bred in-and-in, they revert more or less to their originals, and each succeeding season finds them less prolific and less remunerative. Every one who desires good results from Plymouth Rocks should change the cocks annually, by procuring new ones from yards at a distance, thus preventing relationship.

Among the several good crosses, excepting the use of the Leghorn, which lay at the age of five months, we can rely on a cross of the Dominick and the Brahma, the Houdan and the Cochin, and the Plymouth Rock with the common fowl. A cross will invigorate the stock in any yard, but in no case use a mongrel for a sire. The hens may be mongrels, if desired, but the cock should be of the best and purest strain.

To get eggs in winter a perfect system of cleanliness should be practiced. The droppings should be frequently removed and preserved for future use, and while it is necessary to have the quarters warm and the fowls protected against the ingress of cold draughts, care must be taken to have ventilation. A crack in the boards, no matter how small, will give a whole flock the roup, and filthy quarters and roosts will promote a successful sweeping off by the cholera.

The food should be varied. Soft food in the morning and whole grain at night is better than the usual irregularities practiced. A cheap mess can be prepared for a morning meal by running hay through a fodder cutter, steeping it over night, and, after giving it a warming in the morning, thicken with meal, and feed on boards or any other clean place.

It is wasteful to feed cracked corn, or even screenings. Though seemingly cheaper than whole grain, the difference will be apparent if a comparison is made. Avoid overfeeding or too much fat. A fat hen—or one extremely so—is as useless as one that is insufficiently fed. A moderate, changeable diet, with good warm quarters, plenty of cracked oyster shells and some meat scraps from time to time, will give eggs in abundance in winter; but, like all other stock on the farm, poultry, in order to be profitable, must receive personal supervision and care.—Philadelphia Record.

Take Good Care of the Horses.

There is no animal so likely to be neglected on the farm as the horse. The horse of the city truckman, or of the expressman, the driving horse and the saddle horse, are well cared for, but the farm horse is too often irregularly fed; and so far as cleaning is concerned, regularly and systematically neglected. It is difficult to obtain a hired man brought up on a farm who thinks there is any necessity for taking special care of a horse. Some horses upon the farm are rarely if ever properly cleaned, and yet the condition and usefulness of the farm horse depends as much upon the manner in which it is cared for as any other horse. When brought perspiring to the stable, he ought not to be allowed to stand over night with the dust drying upon him. A good cleaning is half the rest, and yet how often we see the farm horse brought out in the morning covered with dirt of the day before, and with the accumulated filth of the night still clinging to him. Under such conditions a horse is not much more than half a horse. Often, too, he is irregularly fed and indiscreetly watered. A horse at work should have water five or six times a day. If he does not drink more than two or three quarts at a time, all the better. A horse that is kept from water until he will drink two or three pailfuls, will be very likely to have his digestive organs and bowels seriously deranged. To keep a horse in good working condition, he should be fed regularly whether at work or idle in the stable. He will last many years longer than if, when at work, he is heavily fed, and when idle, neglected. A horse on the farm should always be cleaned at least once a day, when working, both night and morning. If not at work a good grooming once a day would be sufficient, and when idle, good hay might be substituted for grain at the noonday meal; but when at work grain should be given, as he would obtain more nutrition in half an hour from grain than in many hours from hay. A hired man who is worthy of hire will take pride in ministering to the comfort and improving the appearance of the animals he drives.

Good Only for Locksmiths.

Apropos of the Medical Congress, here is a story which will amuse such of my readers as happen to be "licensed to kill." It appears that an epidemic of typhoid fever broke out in a small village in the south of France. A locksmith fell ill and called in a local medical man, who came, prescribed and went away. The next day during his usual rounds, he called at the locksmith's, and asked his wife after the health of the interesting patient. She replied, "Ah, sir, only imagine; while I went to fetch the medicine my husband ate two pickled herrings and a dish of bean salad." "Good heavens! Then he is—" "Quite well, doctor. He went to work this morning, and is as well as possible." "That is extraordinary," exclaimed the doctor; "what a wonderful remedy for typhoid! I must make a note of it." And he accordingly entered in his notebook, "Typhoid fever; tried remedy, two pickled herrings and bean salad." Two days afterward a bricklayer was attacked by the same disorder. "Take," said the same doctor, who was consulted, "two pickled herrings and a dish of bean salad. I will come again tomorrow." Tomorrow—alas! the bricklayer was dead. The doctor, taking a logical view of his experimental method, again entered in the famous notebook, "Typhoid fever; remedy, pickled herrings and bean salad. Good for locksmiths, bad for bricklayers."—London Court Circular.

The Power of The Press.

One of the old time editors of Michigan was boasting the other day that he had never been sued for libel or attacked in his sanctum, but he could recall many narrow escapes. Twenty-five years ago he was running a red hot paper on the line of the Michigan Central railroad. A man named Carson, who was running for some county office, was given a bad racket, and the editor received a note that if he had anything more to say he might expect to receive a good pounding. He had a still more bitter attack the next week, and the paper was hardly mailed before in walked Carson, the candidate, accompanied by a brother and two cousins. The four were strapping big fellows, and each was armed with a horsewhip. The two compositors and the 'devil' got out with all speed. He realized the situation at once, and began:

'Walk in, gentlemen; I presume you have come to horsewhip me?'

'We have,' they answered.

'Very well. Have you thoroughly considered the matter.'

'It doesn't need any consideration,' replied Carson. 'You have lied about me, and I'm going to lick you within an inch of your life!'

'Just so, my friend, but first hear what I have to say. Did you ever hear of the press being stopped because the editor was cowhided?'

'I dunno.'

'Well, you never did. Lick me all you choose and my paper comes out week after week just the same. The power of the press is next to the lever which moves the universe. It makes or breaks parties, builds up or tears down, plants and destroys. Aggravate the editor and the press becomes a sword to wound and kill. Wallop me if you will, but next week I'll come out more bitter than ever.'

There was an embarrassing silence right here, and the face of each horsewhipper had an anxious look.

'It will go out to the world—to America, Canada, England, France,—aye! clear to Jerusalem, that the Carson family of this country live on roots and johnny-cake, that they stole a dog from a blind man; that they murdered a peddler for a pair of two shilling suspenders; that the women are club footed and the men work their ears when they sing; that the ——'

'What is the regular subscription price to the Herald?' interrupted Carson.

'Only twelve shillings a year.'

'Put us four down.'

'Very well—six dollars—that's correct. Run in and see me—all of you, and if any of you want to see any of my Detroit exchanges I shall be only too glad to serve you.—Free Press.

AN OLD WOMAN'S ADVICE.

Aunt Rachel, writing to the Cincinnati Enquirer, says: "When you feel unwell, and think you must take medicine, for goodness' sake, 'get the best.' If you need a remedy that will make you regular in your habits, give you a good natural appetite, make your skin clear and smooth, and remove all spots and blemishes that indicate ill health; if you wish to be free from mental depression, fretfulness, peevishness, wakefulness and other disorders, use Brown's Iron Bitters."

Manure should be forked over occasionally to make it fine. If it is heating, muck or loam should be placed with it to absorb the ammonia which is formed during the process of decomposition.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

The Great Unfailing SPECIFIC FOR Liver Complaint.

THE SYMPTOMS OF LIVER COMPLAINT are uneasiness and pain in the side, sometimes pain in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism; the Stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; bowels, in general, costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, and dull, heavy sensation; considerable loss of memory, with painful reflection of having left undone something which ought to have been done; often complaining of weakness, debility and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the liver is generally the organ most involved.

REGULATE THE LIVER, AND PREVENT Dyspepsia, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Attacks, Chills and Fever, Headache, Colic, Depression of Spirits, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Piles, etc.

Tonic, Alterative and Cathartic!

Simmons Liver Regulator, purely vegetable, is the medicine generally used in the South to arouse the torpid Liver to healthy action.

The action of the Regulator is free from nausea or griping. It is most effective in starting the secretions of the Liver, causing the bile to act as a cathartic. When there is an excess of bile in the Stomach, the Regulator is an active purge; after the removal of the bile it will regulate the bowels and impart vigor and health to the whole system.

Bloomsburg, Columbia County, Pennsylvania.

Rev. D. J. WALLER, Jr., Ph. D., Principal.

THIS SCHOOL, as at present constituted, offers the very best facilities for Professional and Classical learning.
Buildings spacious, inviting and commodious; completely heated by steam, well ventilated, lighted by gas, and furnished with a bountiful supply of pure, soft spring water.
Location healthful, and easy of access. Teachers experienced, efficient, and alive to their work. Discipline, firm but kind, uniform and thorough. Expenses moderate. Fifty cents a week deduction to all expecting to teach. Students admitted at any time. Rooms reserved when desired.
Courses of study prescribed by the State:
I. Model School. II. Preparatory. III. Elementary. IV, Classical.
Adjunct Courses: I. Academic. II. Commercial. III. Course in Music. IV. Course in Art. V. Course in Physical Culture.
The Elementary, Scientific and Classical Courses are PROFESSIONAL, and Students graduating therein, receive State Diplomas, conferring the following corresponding Degrees; Master of the Elements; Master of the Sciences; Master of the Classics. Graduates in the other Courses receive Normal Certificates their attainments, signed by the Officers of the Board of Trustees.
The course of study prescribed by the State is liberal, and the Scientific and Classical courses are not inferior to those of our best Colleges.
The State requires a higher order of citizenship. The times demand it. It is one of the prime objects of this School to help to secure it, by furnishing intelligent and efficient Teachers for her Schools. To this end it solicits young persons of good abilities and good purposes,—those who desire to improve their time and their talents, as Students. To all such it promises aid in developing their powers, and abundant opportunities for well paid labor after leaving School. For Catalogue, address the Principal.

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.
